Richardson Technology Systems Purchased by South Western Communications

ATLANTA (October 1, 2009) – Joseph Ciotti, president of Richardson Technology Systems Inc. (TSI), announced today the purchase of Richardson TSI by South Western Communications Inc. (SWC) to form SWC-Richardson Technology Systems. The privately held technology systems integrator will maintain its Suwanee, Ga., offices and continue to expand its resources and services to healthcare and education facilities in Georgia.

“Richardson TSI and SWC have worked and grown together over the past 20 years as neighboring Rauland distributors,” says Ciotti. “We are pleased to announce that SWC has purchased Richardson TSI, allowing us to continue to grow and provide superior service and advanced technology solutions to both our healthcare and education clients.”

SWC, headquartered in Newburgh, Ind., has been an innovative leader in the electronics and communication technology industry since 1976. Through a network of specialized divisions and four, now five, fully-staffed strategic office locations, SWC offers progressive systems technology by integrating flexible communications solutions for healthcare, educational, commercial/industrial, and detention applications.

“SWC-Richardson Technology Systems will continue Richardson TSI’s mission of providing powerful integrated technology solutions that enhance patient and student outcomes, and safety, while enhancing efficiencies for hospitals and schools,” says President of SWC-Richardson Technology Systems Todd Lucy.
